ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

My sincerest thanks go to my committee members for their encouragement and support throughout the course of my research. Dr. Griffin Campbell, Dr. Blake Howe, Professor Deborah Chodacki and Dr. Michelynn McKnight, your time and efforts have been invaluable to my success.

The completion of this project could not have come to pass had it not been for the assistance of my peers here at Louisiana State University. To Gregory H. Vogler, your insights and guidance have made this project a reality. I am forever grateful for your friendship and support. To my “editorial board,” Kevin McMann, Brian Dunbar-Kastella, Cassie Gen-chak, and Sam Schreiber, thank you for being my eyes throughout the editorial process.

I would also like to thank the University of Southern Mississippi libraries, the Louisiana State University libraries, Dr. Lois Kuyper-Rushing, Dr. Carol Barry, and Jennifer Blackwell, editor of The Saxophone Symposium, for the information and resources that were made available to me during my research.

Finally, I would like to express my deepest gratitude to all of the previous editors of The Saxophone Symposium: Walker Smith, Ronald Caravan, Thomas Liley, Brian Ayscue, Brad Foley, James Dawson, Allyn Reilly, Thomas Smialek, Stacy Maugans, and Jennifer Turpen. It is only because of the efforts of these people that this important journal has been made possible.

ABSTRACT

The Saxophone Symposium is the journal of the North American Saxophone Alliance and is a peer-reviewed academic publication. Since 1976, its readership has enjoyed articles on a variety of saxophone related topics as well as reviews of contemporary recordings and publications. Aside from these academic applications, The Saxophone Symposium is an historical account of some of the saxophone culture in North America and beyond.

Academic journals such as this are invaluable to both students and educators, and the ability to access the information within them is vital. Prior to the digital age, the majority of serious academic journals have been archived within bound collections, which are sometimes accompanied by an index of the materials in each collection. It is now becoming more common to find these materials available through online databases such as The Music Index, WorldCat, RILM, and JSTOR. Unfortunately, The Saxophone Symposium is rarely available as a bound collection and is not fully archived through digital databases. The accessibility of this important journal is dependent upon its individual print availability, and there is no complete index of its content in existence.

Saxophone as an academic study has not enjoyed the same long, rich history as other areas of the music discipline, but the output of writings, repertoire and research materials produced in our field is impressive given the constraints of history. I believe it imperative that the community of saxophonists should enjoy access to everything that The Saxophone Symposium has to offer. This project will provide that access.
INTRODUCTION

The Saxophone Symposium is the journal of the North American Saxophone Alliance and is a peer-reviewed academic publication. Since 1976, its readership has enjoyed articles on a variety of saxophone related topics as well as reviews of contemporary recordings and publications. Aside from these academic applications, The Saxophone Symposium is an historical account of some of the saxophone culture in North America and beyond.

Academic journals such as this are invaluable to both students and educators, and the ability to access the information within them is vital. Prior to the digital age, the majority of serious academic journals have been archived within bound collections, which are sometimes accompanied by an index of the materials in each collection. It is now becoming more common to find these materials available through online databases such as The Music Index, WorldCat, RILM, and JSTOR. Unfortunately, The Saxophone Symposium is rarely available as a bound collection and is not fully archived through digital databases. The accessibility of this important journal is dependent upon its individual print availability, and there is no complete index of its content in existence.

The purpose of this project has been to catalogue the writings within The Saxophone Symposium in order to create an index of its contents. This process has consisted of spending time with each individual issue to determine which items warrant indexing and then organizing those items in a meaningful way. It has not been my intent to place value on the writings within the journal. The topic of exclusion will be discussed in section labeled, “How to Use The Index.”
The Saxophone Symposium has served multiple purposes throughout its history. In its earliest stages, the North American Saxophone Alliance, or NASA, was conceived as an extension of the World Saxophone Congress and The Saxophone Symposium an extension of The World Saxophone Congress Newsletter. The journal provided news, announcements, and administrative correspondence between NASA and its members in addition to scholarly writings and reviews. This format was the standard for the first 20 volumes of the journal. Prior to 1996, The Saxophone Symposium was published quarterly. All subsequent volumes have been published on an annual or biennial basis. The researcher should note that there are inconsistencies in the publication frequency and number of issues within some of the volumes. Appendix 2 provides a listing of all years with their corresponding volume and issue numbers.

Once the journal transitioned into an annual publication, the overall format of The Saxophone Symposium changed drastically. The earlier functions of the journal as a newsletter were completely phased out and the contents were restricted to scholarly writings, reviews and advertisements. In addition to this major difference, the physical aspects of the journal were changed.

As stated earlier, The Saxophone Symposium has not been indexed or archived in its entirety. The data collection phase of this project revealed the existence of an indexing project. The initial idea of creating volume indices of The Saxophone Symposium was started by Brian Ayscue and Barbara A. Christopher. Each volume index was to be published in the following volume. This practice covered the first 16 volumes of the journal and was continued by Allyn Reilly through volume 20. Note that the exception is volume 18, which was not indexed. While these indices are well done and informative, the limited availability of The Saxophone Symposium has prevented them from fulfilling their purpose.

Saxophone as an academic study has not enjoyed the same long, rich history as other areas of the music discipline, but the output of writings, repertoire, and research materials produced in our field is impressive given the constraints of history. I believe it imperative that the community of saxophonists should enjoy access to everything that The Saxophone Symposium has to offer. This project will provide that access.
HOW TO USE THE INDEX

This document in its entirety will be referred to as The Index. It is divided into three parts: an Annotated Author Index, a Subject Index, and an Index of Reviews. The Index should be viewed as a finding aid for the first 35 volumes of The Saxophone Symposium and it is my intent that it will guide researchers to the printed volumes themselves.

Locator Information

Each entry has been given a locator, in the format of {Vol, No: Page(s)}, which provides the researcher with the item’s volume number, issue number, and page(s). As stated earlier, there have been a number of inconsistencies in the publication frequency of The Saxophone Symposium through the years. At the time of the 1998 publication of volume 23, the journal had fully transitioned into an annual publication. Items from these volumes will have the letter ‘A’ in place of the issue number to indicate their annual publication.

Part I: Annotated Author Index

This section of The Index is organized according to the author of the article and provides brief annotations for each item. Entries include the following: Author Name, Title, Locator, and Annotation. See the below example on the formatting of these entries.

Brown, Anthony
“New Techniques for the Saxophone: The Performer’s Dilemma” {1, 3: 23}
Brown writes on the necessity for clear performance instructions in new saxophone works that employ extended techniques. In addition to this message to composers, Brown provides some resources for saxophonists concerning extended techniques.

Part II: Subject Index

This section of The Index is organized according to the subject headings attached to each entry. The names of institutions and people have also been included in the Subject Index for instances in which those people and places are the subjects of an entry. If an item has been tagged with multiple subject headings, that item will be listed with each of those subject headings and thus may be found in multiple places within the Subject Index.

This part of The Index is directly related to the Annotated Author Index. The researcher who has found an entry of interest within the Subject Index may then refer to the Annotated Author Index in order to locate the annotation for that entry.

The entries in the Subject Index include the following: Author Name, Title, and Locator. See the below example of these entries.

Alexander Technique
   Belling, Jamie “Preventative Maintenance in Saxophone Performance Using Alexander Technique and Body Mapping” {32, A: 1-26}

Part III: Index of Reviews

This section of The Index is further divided into three parts: Publication Reviews, Recording Reviews, and Performance Reviews. The entries in this section of The Index are not included in the Subject and Annotated Author Indices. Thus, “Part III: Index of Reviews” should be viewed as a collection, which is separate from the other items within The Index. In the case of the Publication Reviews, entries are organized alphabetically by name of the author or composer of the publication.

This collection of entries includes all publications reviewed within The Saxophone Symposium. For example, if a researcher wants to know if Respirations for alto saxophone and piano by Pierre-Max Dubois has been reviewed in The Saxophone Symposium, they have only to find “Dubois” in the Publication Reviews section to find the entry. See the example below.

Dubois, Pierre-Max
   Respirations for alto saxophone and piano, reviewed by Greenberg, Roger {11,2:24}
Within the Recording and Performance Reviews, entries are organized alphabetically by the name of the saxophonist who is being reviewed. For example, a student who is writing a paper on James Houlik’s recordings would locate “Houlik” within the Recording Reviews section to see a listing of the reviews. Reviews of performances are organized in the same way. See the below example.

Houlik, James

James Houlik Plays the Tenor Saxophone, Reviewed by James S. Hill
{2, 2: 25-26}

Robert Ward: Jubilation Overture, Symphony No. 4, Concerto for Saxophone and Orchestra, Sonic Structure, Reviewed by Brian Ayscue
{15, 4: 25}

A Note on Inclusions and Exclusions

The data collection and organization processes of this project included making decisions about what items would be included in The Index. As I have stated earlier, it has not been my intent to place value on writings within The Saxophone Symposium. However, my exploration of the journal revealed many items that did not warrant indexing.

Advertisements and individual photographs have not been included in The Index. Rather, if an item includes photographs or diagrams, their inclusion has been noted within the annotation for that item. Future research may include a catalogue of such items, but this was ultimately outside the scope of the current project.

In its quarterly format, The Saxophone Symposium served as the central means of communication to the members of NASA. Because of this, many items within each issue served administrative purposes and are no longer applicable to saxophonists today. I made the decision to exclude items such as these because they posed no clear record of history and did not present significant information on a topic, place or person. I found the same to be true of the announcements of events that had yet to happen at the time of publication.
For example, a news item announcing the location of a future conference will not be found in The Index, while another news item announcing the occurrence of such a conference has been included. Essentially, if an item documents saxophone history, NASA history or provides relevant information on a topic or person, it has been included in The Index.

Ashley Kelly, a native of Cullman, Alabama, received her bachelor’s degree in 2008 from the University of Montevallo where she studied music education and saxophone performance. In the spring of 2011, she received her master’s degree from the University of New Mexico where she also studied saxophone performance. Since the fall of 2011, Ashley has served as the graduate teaching assistant to the Louisiana State University saxophone studio and will receive her doctorate of musical arts in August 2015. Following graduation, she plans on pursuing a career in higher education.
